

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Misses Mary Bailey and Elizabeth Draper of Boston spent Sunday with Mrs. Mattie Bailey, of School street.

As in every office throughout the country, business was suspended for one minute at 11 o'clock Sunday forenoon at the local telephone exchange, in memory of Theodore N. Vail, president of the A. & T. company, with which the S. N. E. company is affiliated.

A number of members of Rose of Lima council, K. of C., were at Putnam Sunday afternoon to witness the conferring of the third degree upon a class of candidates in that city.

field cemetery. Friends acted as bearers.

Martin, who died at his home near South Killingly some time since, were conducted Sunday at 1 p. m., members of Highland grange of South Killingly attending and acting as bearers. Burial was at the Line Street cemetery. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

J. Carl Witter, who has been engaged in the auction business here for years, is to have a Worcester office to care for business that is developing in that state. Mr. Witter will continue to maintain his headquarters in Danielson.

Mrs. James Kent of Elmville was in Providence Saturday to attend the silver wedding anniversary of a relative. Chief John McFarland of the Danielson police has received a request that he co-operate with the state motor vehicle department in having enforced the regulations relative to legal lenses on cars, relative to tailights being kept illuminated at night and relative to motorists keeping the number plates on their machines cleaned so that the numbers may be read.

William Stein, of Elmville, was struck by a southbound trolley car Saturday night at about 10 o'clock at Elmville, and quite severely, though not dangerously, injured. He received a cut in the leg and other slight cuts and bruises. He was removed to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam. It was stated after the accident that Mr. Stein was walking along the state highway at a point near the William Sayles farm and stepped out of the way of a motor vehicle and so close up to the trolley track that an approaching car, which evidently did not see or hear, struck him a glancing blow.

State Automobile Inspector R. C. Young received a complaint Sunday morning that an automobile, ran his machine among a herd of cows passing along a highway in the town of Canterbury and knocked one of the animals down. The cows are the property of E. F. Johnson of Canterbury. The matter will be investigated.

Mr. Young received another complaint Sunday of a collision between two cars at Almyville, a part of Stoughton, late on Saturday night. One woman was slightly injured in this crash.

It has been of interest to people here to note that papers published in many parts of New England have given space to the tire fabric movement by motor trucks to Akron, O., and that Danielson, in turn, has received much valuable publicity, as has Goodenow. With the apparent settlement of the railroad transportation difficulties the need of using the trucks will rapidly disappear, though the plan scheduled will be carried out.

Those who have been over South Killingly way and have noted where stakes for the new state highway are set are pleased over the fact that some of the sharp curves now in the old road will be straightened out or greatly improved. The grade also will be materially changed in places. As the Rhode Island state highway department is to improve the broken stretch of state highway on its side of the line eastward from Little Rest the completed highway will bring Providence within 45 minutes motoring distance of Danielson.

Nehemiah Wood, who has been ill for months, at his home in North Sterling, is still feeble. He is being cared for by Miss Evelyn Soule, formerly of Danielson.

Saturday, the funeral of Joseph Alcide Rainville, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Adelard Rainville, was held from their home on Dyer street, with a service at St. James' church, Rev. John Roux, M. S., officiating. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery. M. T. Burns was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

A. D. Blake of Ansonia-Dorby is to be superintendent of transportation for the local lines of the Connecticut company. Mr. Blake began his trolley road experience on the Danielson line and has since climbed rapidly to a position of great responsibility. Mr. Blake's home was in Brooklyn before he began his street railroad career. For years he has held positions of trust for the Connecticut company.

Scores of young apple trees and other young fruit trees will die as the result of having their bark stripped off by hungry animals, such as rabbits and the like, during that period of the winter when the snow was so deep in this territory as to cut off the usual supplies of food. Persons who have been out in the country districts marvel at the extent of the stripping.

JEWETT CITY

The history of the 23 cemeteries as written by D. L. Phillips is completed when that of the Jewett City home cemetery is told. The inscriptions recorded in the book have not been given in the series of articles sent to The Bulletin. Many persons, among them out of town former residents, have expressed themselves as greatly interested in this history. The state librarian at Hartford, George S. Godard, in a letter to the town clerk expressed deep interest also, having read these articles in The Bulletin.

The Jewett City lower cemetery is on the west side of the borough of Jewett City and its entrance is on Anthony street. The land which is covered was once a part of that farm which James Avery, 2d, of the Avery Hive purchased in 1792-3, when Jewett City was known by its Indian name, Pamaquansaque, and Pachauque river was called Pachauque brook. The Avery family continued to hold this land for nearly a century, and it is probable that before the title went out of that name and blood this particular spot was used as a burial place.

After the organization of the Second Congregational church, Griswold (Jewett City), in 1825, this cemetery began and continued to be known as the Congregational bury-ground. In 1834 Capt. Charles Panning, the owner at that time, formally decided that portion of the spot was used as a burial place.
